

PAPER

Paper propels high school students toward college and career readiness

When it comes to the many challenges posed by post-high school life, savvy educators know early and robust support can make all the difference to students' success after graduation.

Now, students can secure college- and career-related support right from our Review Center! By uploading relevant pieces of written content to Paper—from the first draft of a resume to a professional email and even a college application—students receive comments from seasoned tutors that can propel them toward their next chapter with confidence.

How does Paper support college and career readiness?

Paper's Review Center is now a one-stop shop for students seeking advice on many forms of writing they'll need to produce after graduation. Below are some of the college- and career-related documents our tutors are ready to assess.

College applications

With support from Paper's tutors, students drafting up college application essays can rest assured that they're submitting a clearly written and impactful story to admissions officers.

Business letters

Formal business letters can present new challenges for students just jumping into the working world. By uploading their business letter drafts to Paper, students can make sure their i's are dotted and their t's are crossed.

Cover letters

Paper's tutors can help students narrow down the key points that will grab potential employers' attention.

Resumes

Students looking to neatly summarize their work history and put their most relevant skills on display are free to upload their resume drafts to Paper.

Emails

Students drafting up business-related emails can upload their drafts straight to Paper for expert tips on how to strike a more professional tone.
